Anderson Mori & Tomotsune is one of the largest and most international Japanese law firms. It is best known for its long history of advising overseas companies doing business in Japan and in cross-border transactions. The main office in Tokyo is supported by two offices in Japan and seven overseas. The firm has one of the leading fintech practices in Japan. With extensive experience across all areas of fintech, Anderson Mori & Tomotsune's skilled lawyers provide innovative, up-to-date legal advice to clients in this fast-growing and cutting-edge industry. Because of the firm's long history of success and proven understanding of new technology, its advice is regularly sought in fintech-related matters, including applications for licences and regulatory approvals for start-ups; analysis of financial regulatory issues; development and marketing of innovative financial instruments, products and transactions; and consultations and negotiations with official regulatory authorities and self-regulatory organisations.

AUTHORS

Ken Kawai is a partner at Anderson Mori & Tomotsune and has extensive experience advising financial institutions, fintech start-ups, investors and corporate clients on complex finance and financial regulatory matters. Ken focuses primarily on the fintech industry and regularly advises fintech companies, financial institutions, governmental organisations and industry organisations on legal issues surrounding fintech.

Takeshi Nagase is a partner at Anderson Mori & Tomotsune. Between 2013 and 2014, Takeshi served on secondment in the Disclosure Department of the Financial Services Agency of Japan. Additionally, he handled a broad range of finance and corporate transactions on a secondment stint with the legal department of a major Japanese securities firm from 2015–17. As a result of the unique perspective he has gained from these professional experiences, Takeshi has extended his focus to crypto-asset laws, including regulatory requirements applicable to the registration of crypto-asset exchange service providers, initial coin offerings, and NFT businesses.
